

THE ASIAN AGE

3 AUGUST 2003

Lost in the pages of history

Built in 1754 by Indrakumari Maharani of Burdwan, Ambika Kalna's Jagannathbari Shiva temples are built in typical Aatchala style of Bengal school. Standing on the bank of the Ganga, these pieces of architecture are full of excellent curves of terracotta with stories of Hindu mythology and epics crafted in an excellent way. However, history lies in tatters here as the temples are in a dilapidated state. The ASI has not taken any steps to restore the structures.

TEXT AND PHOTOGRAPH BY
SOMEN SENGUPTA